Stacey Skrysak is a seasoned television journalist, writer, and public speaker. She's the parent of a 22 weeker surviving triplet and two children in Heaven. Through her experience, she's become a voice for child loss, infertility, and premature birth. In 2019, Stacey and her husband welcomed a baby girl. Called a "rainbow baby", the term is used to describe a baby born after enduring the loss of a child. Stacey speaks candidly about PTSD and the fear she felt during pregnancy after loss.

Stacey's work can be found worldwide, appearing on popular sites like Today Show, Scary Mommy, Upworthy and Washington Post. Stacey is also the founder of Triple Heart Foundation, a non-profit organization aimed at helping NICU families by providing children's books and care packages. The 501c3 was created in honor of her triplets.
